Being a Column of Chatter About People You Know . . .
By DOROTHY M. OGDEN

Du-u-no that Narberth will shortly be on the map—the Philadelphia Inquirer is going to do a story about the Boro in its August 4th issue, so keep your eyes open for it. . . .

Congratulations to "Whitey" Graham (He's the brother of Mark, the manager of the Wynnewood House). He is the proud father of a new baby girl, and the Grahams had quite a family party last Monday night to celebrate. Where? Why at the Wynnewood House, of course. . . .

Talking with George Gazella, coach of the St. Margaret's Baseball Team, he told me that Captain Albie Becker had received an offer from the Phillies. "Quite an honor, isn't it?" But then, I understand that the team had a continuous winning streak for the past couple of years. Incidentally, that isn't all I understand about that team—George tells me that they have quite a feminine following, too. . . .

Welcome home to Henry Frye, Boro Solicitor, who just returned from his Pocono vacation. His family, I understand, will stay there for a while longer, enjoying the cool breezes, lucky people. . . .
Congratulations to Guy Mosteller. He's just received a positive answer to his proposal of marriage to Eleanor Moore of Grayling Ave. Guess you know that Guy has been home from the 1st Division of the USMC for only a short time. He's now in business with his dad in the Boro. . . .
Met up with Bob and May Cameron at the Township reception held in honor of Mayor Evan Jones' 25th anniversary on Tuesday afternoon at Haverford Court Hotel. Bob was telling me about the day he spent last week visiting with U. S. Representative Sam McConnell down in Congress. . . .
It must have been quite an interesting time, starting out with opening the congressman's morning mail. Bob said that he goes through each piece of mail, reading it diligently, and weighing the arguments pro and con. He said that there were about 100 letters in that day's mail about the OPA bill—he also said that one Montgomery County resident has sent Sam so many letters that he has a file all his own. . . .
Later on in the day, Bob and Sam went over to the House, while

Body of Child Found
In 5 Feet of Water
In Brookline Pool

A six-year-old Kirklyn child was drowned in the Brookline Swimming Pool Saturday afternoon while scores of other children were swimming and diving in the pool.

Sandra Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Anderson, of 10 S. Harwood Ave., was taken to the pool by her aunt, Mrs. Mabel Caldwell. According to members of her family, it was the first time she had gone swimming.

Mrs. Caldwell told Haverford Township police she left her niece sitting on a bench at the side of the pool. "When I came out of the bathroom, Sandra was gone," she said.

She said pool life guards searched for the child for several minutes, and not finding her, told the manager, Harold Geiges.

Geiges told guard David Pierson to search the bottom of the pool in a diving helmet.

Pierson went down three times. The third time he found the girl in five and a half feet of water.

Resuscitator Sent For
The Haverford Township resuscitator and the rescue squad of the Brookline Fire Company worked over the child for three and a half hours before Sandra was pronounced dead by Dr. Caroline Vekoskoski. However the rescue squad continued their efforts until 9:10 P. M., when the girl was taken to the home of Delaware County Deputy Coroner John J. Stretch, Jr., of Eagle Rd., Merwood.

She was to have entered the first grade in Highland Park School in September.

Funeral services were held at her parents' home at 1:30 P. M. Wednesday. She was buried in St. Paul's Lutheran Cemetery.

Monument to Negro Composer Dedicated in Merion Cemetery

James A. Bland, Who Died in Poverty, Honored by Lions Club; Two Local Men Aid Campaign of Recognition for Minstrel

Thirty-five years ago, when James A. Bland, Negro composer of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," died in Philadelphia at the age of 57, there wasn't enough money to pay for his $25 funeral or to mark his grave.

But last Monday afternoon, Governor William M. Tucker, of Virginia, together with representatives of the Lions Club of Virginia, went to Bland's grave in Merion Cemetery at Bryn Mawr Ave. and Rockhill Rd., Bala-Cynwyd. There they dedicated a handsome granite slab marking the grave which for years lay almost hidden by weeds.

Several years ago, two prominent local citizens launched a drive to have the body of Bland moved from its neglected grave to a place of honor in a plot of ground owned by Lower Merion Township.

Months of effort were expended by John J. Cabrey, Narberth civic leader, and Dr. Albert C. Barnes, head of the famous Barnes Foundation at Merion. But the Lower Merion Township Commissioners did not see eye to eye with them and refused to allocate the necessary land for the proposed shrine.

It was the Lions Club of Virginia that successfully sponsored legislation to make Bland's famous song the official anthem of the state. And it was the Lions who raised the money for the monument. In fact, they collected so much that some remains which will be used to establish music scholarships in Bland's name for Negro Virginians.

Despite the popularity of the song, many persons even today will answer "Stephen Foster" when asked who wrote the plaintive old song of home.

Seven-Year Search
It was a Philadelphia, Dr. James Francis Cooke, musician, composer, editor, and president of Theodore Presser Co., who tracked down the elusive story of Bland for seven years, searching through every reference on music known to the library world.

Not one volume carried Bland's name. Meanwhile, Etude, the music magazine of which Dr. Cooke is editor, received numerous requests for information about the composer of the song, which has sold over a million copies.

Dr. Cooke wrote to the Oliver Ditson Co. music publishers in Boston, owned by Presser's, which held the copyright. The answer came back, "I think Bland was a Negro." Tracing the family from this start, Dr. Cooke came to the end of the story in the records of the Bureau of Vital Statistics in Philadelphia.

Bland, the records showed, died at 1012 Wood St., on May 5, 1911, at the age of 57, poor and unknown. Dr. Cooke found his grave in the Merion Cemetery.

A True Minstrel
By talking to the few friends of Bland still living, Dr. Cooke uncovered the composer's amazing career. He was, he found, a true minstrel, who haunted every show in the city of Washington, his banjo under his arm, and begged for a part which was denied.

When at last success crowned his song over-night, he was taken on as endman, and toured Europe, England and Scotland, singing his hit of the time. Royalties began pouring in from the 700 songs he wrote, then strummed and sang over the land. Then he began drinking heavily and passed into obscurity.

He came back to the United States without funds, late in his life, and obtained desk space, to compose, in the office of a friend in Washington. His last song, "The Sporting Girl," was sold for $250 to the comedian team, Slavin and McNish. Then, discouraged, he came to Philadelphia, where the only known fact of his existence here is the death certificate filed in City Hall.

Father a College President
These additional facts have been established by Dr. Cooke. The composer's father was Allen M. Bland, president of Wilberforce College, the first Negro in this country to become a college president.

His mother was born in Wilmington. Both parents came of free families. The composer, one of twelve children, was born in Flushing, L. I., and was educated in the public schools in Washington, after his father became an examiner in the U. S. Patent Office.

Both the composer and his father registered as students in Howard University. The boy was known as a musical prodigy, and organized glee clubs which put on serenades for visiting celebrities in Washington. Later he became a page in the House of Representatives, but finding he had no time to play his banjo or to write his songs, he resigned.

Then came the period when he sought jobs from every minstrel company visiting Washington and was turned down.

Keystone Club Issues Warning On Hitch-Hikers

A new warning against hitch-hikers, based on recent outrages in which well-intentioned motorists have been beaten, robbed and even slain, has been issued by Keystone Automobile Club.

"During the war," said Edward P. Curran, Safety Director of the Club, "the bars against hitch-hiking were let down in favor of service men, thousands of whom reached home on short furloughs through the accommodating motorist at a time when it would have been next to impossible to make the trip on overcrowded public transportation systems. Motorists were glad to render this service, which was greatly appreciated by the men in uniform.

Free Riders
"With the ending of war there has been no lessening in the demand for motor transportation, but the prospective riders are not boys hurrying home from camp or ship, but brazen moochers who can well afford to ride in buses or trains but who prefer to ride free at the expense of easy-going and indulgent car owners.

"Occasionally—as in the recent case of a motorist murdered in Montgomery County—the public is horrified by the act of some brigand who is taken into a car. But the average person tells himself, 'This couldn't happen to me; I'm careful about the kind of riders I pick up,' and the hitch-hikers find no lessening in the numbers of motorists willing to stop at the wag of his thumb.

"For those who have suffered grievously at the hands of self-invited guests, this warning (although one of a series of many issued by the Club in the last 20 years) is too late, but for those who can be impressed by the misfortunes of others, it is timely and we hope it will be heeded. Just remember this: The hitch hiker has no more claim on you for a free ride than he has on the train conductor or bus driver. Your car, your valuables, even your life, may be the price you will be required to pay for accommodating him."

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Use of Unproductive Sand Making Food Shipments Possible for U. S.

(Special to Central Press)

Washington.—One of the big reasons why America has been able to contribute so generously to world food consumption is the fact that thousands of acres of heretofore barren, Western land has been made prolific.

Under the supervision of the United States Bureau of Reclamation, government - irrigated lands, last year, produced food, feed and fibre crops valued at more than $424,000,000. And will in the future produce even more because of the added impetus given to food production by the completion of the lining of the Alva B. Adams tunnel, the longest irrigation bore in the world.

Part of the Colorado - Big Thompson project, the tunnel is designed to divert surplus water from the Western slope of the Rockies to dry lands in Eastern slope. And when finished will provide a supplemental water supply for more than 600,000 acres of land in Northeastern Colorado—land which, because of water shortages prior to project construction, sustained an estimated annual loss of $4,700,000.

Now with the Adams tunnel bringing in 310,000 acre-feet of water each year, it is expected that the 175,000 people living in the territory will increase their crop production, at present prices, fully seven million dollars annually.

At the instigation of the late Senator Alva B. Adams, after whom the tunnel was named, the bore was started in 1940, and after many war-time stop and go difficulties, was finally holed through four years after. It was begun simultaneously by two contracting companies on either side of the Continental Divide. When the two-way bores met, miles underground, they were within a fraction of an inch of each other—truly a great engineering feat. S. S. Magoffin, Inc., of Englewood, Colo., was the contractor for the Eastern half and Stiers Brothers Construction Co. of St. Louis, Mo., for the Western half.

The two outfits met at a point approximately eight miles in from the East portal and five miles from the West portal. For a number of days before holed through, the advancing crews could hear each other drilling and shouting and on the morning of June 7, 1944, drilling was discontinued in the West heading for reasons of safety, and the East side forces holed through.

Besides helping set the record for the longest tunnel ever excavated from two faces the Magoffin forces established a new mark for the greatest advance at one heading. They drilled so far, in fact, that work-crews were allowed travel time of one hour after the bore had been advanced 18,000 feet. This time was later increased to two and one-half hours as the 35,000-foot mark was reached.

The slower progress made by the crews from the West can easily be explained by the fact that the tunnel sloped from West to East to provide for gravity flow of water. This slant not only made it necessary for the Western forces to haul all muck up the hill but included the added difficulty of water at the face which, at times, was waist deep at the head of the shaft.

Starting at the center and working outward, the contracting companies have now completed the cement lining of the 100-foot-in-diameter tunnel which will soon be bringing life to thousands of tons of potatoes, sugar beets, vegetables and feed for beef and dairy cattle.

This land, reclaimed from desert and sagebrush wastes, will soon range among the highest food producing areas in the United States. And will do its part in adding to the food piles of America and in bringing salvation to the starving peoples of the world.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Saving Our Resources

For the past century the Keystone State has drawn heavily on all its great stores of natural wealth. Our oil and natural gas wells and our iron mines have been in continuous operation longer than any in the United States. Every year in the past century Pennsylvania has led the Nation in the production of coal. Our once vast forest resources have been greatly reduced by the demand for railroad ties, mine props, building materials and pulpwood. Great as is the natural fertility of our soil, considerable areas in the State have already become badly eroded, and millions of tons of precious surface soil are annually washed from Pennsylvania's farms by Spring floods.

The wastes of the War have emphasized the fact that Pennsylvania must take immediate steps to protect all those natural resources on which its future prosperity depends.

The activities being undertaken by State agencies to face this problem are highlighted by the Pennsylvania Conservation Education Conference being held at State College on July 19 and 20th which is open to the general public. Many State organizations are sponsoring the Conference which will be addressed by leading Pennsylvania authorities.

The meetings open on Friday morning, July 19, with a general survey of the whole field of conservation by Francis A. Pitkin, Executive Director of the State Planning Board, and close on Saturday, July 20, with an address by the Honorable James H. Duff, Attorney General of the Commonwealth, on the conservation of our water resources, to which he has devoted so much attention during his term in office.

The Conference is being held in connection with the sessions of the Pennsylvania Conservation Laboratory for Teachers—a

Military Solely Responsible For Aiding Kin Of War Dead

War Department Issues Warning to Families Against Groups Offering Assistance

The attention of the War Department has been called to numerous instances in which relatives of those members of the armed forces who are buried in temporary military cemeteries overseas are being appealed to by individuals and groups to join one or more of a variety of organizations which plan to offer special assistance or information regarding graves or cemeteries overseas.

The War Department, through the Public Relations Division, stated that it is not necessary for any relative to join an organization or to contribute to individuals to obtain information of any kind from the official records of the War Department concerning the final burial plans, grave locations or other data about World War II dead.

QMG Only Agency
"The Office of The Quartermaster General is the agency of the War Department responsible for the return and final burial of World War II dead and its facilities are available to the relatives of all overseas deceased. It is not necessary to employ or engage private organizations to get full information. A letter to the Quartermaster General will get all details without any cost whatsoever," said Major General F. L. Parks, Chief of the Public Relations Division.

The attention of the public is called to a recent radio broadcast of Major General T. B. Larkin. The Quartermaster General regarding final disposition of remains, as follows:
"These are questions of such a personal nature that those of you concerned must not be subjected to undue pressure to make decisions which later you may wish to change. You must be permitted time for counsel. For this reason the War Department encourages full discussion of its plans. It will make available to next of kin all information that will permit them to make their own decision. We here in Washington, have no preference one way or the other. We believe this is a question for decision by the closest relative.

Others Lack Knowledge
"Other persons, well intentioned to be sure, but who lack knowledge of all the facts, or who cannot possibly know the innermost feelings of a relative, may try to persuade you. My suggestion is that you be guided by your own sentiments and good judgment. Your Government will do what you want done.

Military Solely Responsible
"Do not accept information from persons who are in no position to give it to you correctly and accurately. Seek your information through official sources. I know you want to avoid erroneous or confused information being circulated."

Many of the proposals for special attention to the graves overseas which have been suggested for relatives to follow have the tinge of commercialism and none have official sanction.

Attempts by those other than members of the immediate family to obtain the names of next of kin from the War Department have been denied. However, it has come to official attention that individuals have written to newspapers advertising for the names of next of kin so individuals overseas might write to these relatives. Newspapers which have received letters of this type from overseas, have, by turning over to the Quartermaster General the names of prospective advertisers for investigation by the Graves Registration Commands overseas.

Adequate Funds
The War Department also called attention to the fact that there are adequate funds in the military appropriations for the proper care of the cemeteries overseas and that these have all been beautified and landscaped and are now being properly cared for. This care and beautification is directed by the Office of the Quartermaster General.

Representation to next of kin by individuals or groups that arrangements will be worked out with the War Department for priority of the return of remains of deceased personnel are unauthorized. The Public Relations Division announced and called attention to a statement by the Quartermaster General issued on May 20, as follows:

Steps Planned
"Each step in the program has been planned to provide dignity and respect in handling the remains of those who gave their lives for their country. No distinction or differences of any kind will be shown because of rank, race, creed or color. No priorities of disposition will be granted and the repatriation activities will follow an orderly process beginning with complete verification of the burial records.

"As soon as verification of records and final checking of plot maps is completed at cemeteries, the plan to return remains from them will be announced. Thus, the making of letters of inquiry to next of kin will be progressive, as the records of each cemetery are completely verified. Letters of inquiry may not be received at the same time by next of kin who may be neighbors unless they have relatives buried in the same cemetery. However, each next of kin will be sent a letter of inquiry at the earliest practicable date and failure to receive a letter at the same time a neighbor or acquaintance receives one should not be cause for concern."

Big College Enrollment
Estimated enrollment of students in the 1,686 colleges, universities and other institutions of higher learning for the 1946 fall term was placed at 1,558,081 by the veterans administration, with the total capacity of these institutions at 1,673,349.

Of this amount, the enrollment of veterans under public laws 16 and 346 was estimated to be 685,321 or 44.6 per cent of the total estimated enrollment for the semester.
Now there are 394,551 veterans enrolled under these laws showing that the entrance problem is not as serious as it was first thought. The survey was conducted by Nelson R. Henson, director of training facilities, service of VA's vocational rehabilitation and educational division. Mr. Henson said his department is now preparing a detailed list of all educational institutions showing names, locations, number of vacancies, etc., to guide veterans in applying for education. These vacancies, it is pointed out, will occur almost entirely in the smaller and lesser known schools as the so-called "big-name and football team colleges are already full-up."

Questions and Answers
Q. I would like to know how long my husband will have to serve in the army. He went in on July 20, 1945 and went overseas March 4, 1945. His dependents are his wife and one son—a worried wife, Ashland, Wis.

A. I am afraid you will have to keep on worrying, for there is no way for me to estimate how long he will be in service since he has only about nine months service May 1 and the army has not issued regulations for discharge before June 30, 1946. He has only earned points from July to September 2, 1945 and has 12 for his dependent son and the army has not set a new date for critical point scores, depending now more on length of service.

Q. Can you tell me how many battle stars or other decorations have been awarded to the 64th bombardment squadron and the 410th bombardment group—J. V.

A. The war department says that the 64th bombardment squadron is credited with the battles of Normandy, northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes and central Europe. The 410th bombardment group, light, with air offensive, Europe.

Q. I was drafted into the USNR and I passed the examinations OK. I stayed in only three weeks and was discharged as inept for naval services. I am now farming and I would like to know if I come under the G. I. bill of rights? — Reader, Ozark, Ala.

A. The law says you must have served at least 90 days unless discharged previously for disability. I cannot tell whether your discharge was for that reason or not.

Q. Is hospitalization or medical care provided for families of men or officers in the merchant marine? — J. L. B., Rising Sun, Ind.

A. No, insofar as I can find out there is no provision of hospitalization or medical service for the families of merchant seamen. Officers and men of the merchant marine, themselves, however, are provided with care in marine hospitals from the public health service.

Q. My husband is in the army and when he was inducted he took out a bond a month. I was receiving them until January when I received the last one, for November. They are still taking the money out of his pay. Where can I write or find out about it? Soldier's wife, Nelsonville, Ohio.

A. Write all details to war bond division, U. S. Army, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo.

home. My health is no good. Where can he get help on a pension?—M. H. Madison, Ala.
A. If he has never applied for a physical disability rating, suggest that he contact his nearest veterans administration office and ask for an examination to determine whether or not he is eligible for a disability pension. There is a contact regional office of VA at Huntsville.

4th Naval District Undertakes Drive

Enlistment Program Started For Personnel; Week's 'Boot' Training

The Fourth Naval District has begun operation of an Enlistment Division for the processing of personnel re-enlisting in the Navy. The new operation, situated in the Philadelphia Naval Base was authorized by the Navy Department when all training camps were found to be heavily overloaded.

Although similar to the original "boot-camp" in detail, the new enlistment Division's routine is brief, permitting men who re-enlist in the Navy to be ready for assignment for duty a week after their arrival.

Programs Identical
The program at the Enlistment Division is identical for men with previous service in any of the armed forces. After arrival, the men are issued a complete sea bag of clothing, following which they are given booster inoculations. Each man is also carefully classified to determine his best value to the naval service, and slated for jobs corresponding to his classification. During the remainder of the time spent in the Enlistment Division, the men undergo a re-indoctrination program consisting of military courtesy and the wearing of the uniform.

In the Philadelphia base alone, the Enlistment Division has handled more than 200 men since its organization on July 1st. After a seven day period of duty in the Enlistment Division, the re-enlistees are assigned to General Detail in the Navy Yard where they await further assignment from Washington.

Material Listed For Sale By Federal Agency

Orders for the surplus goods listed below may be sent to the War Assets Corporation, Consumer Goods Division, Fifth and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia, Philadelphia, 6, Pennsylvania.

Men's white shorts, approximately four million pairs, which cost the United States Government more than $2,000,000 will be disposed of during a fixed price sale conducted by the War Assets Administration, Frank L. MacNamee, Philadelphia Regional Director for WAA announced this week.

This property is offered simultaneously to Federal Agencies, Certified Veterans of World War II, RFC purchasing for small business, State and local governments, and dealers. One per cent of the total volume is set aside for Federal Agencies. Other orders will be filled in priority sequence as outlined. Fixed prices to priority buyers and wholesale dealers will be 25c per pair and they may purchase from one to 10 units and from three to 10 units respectively. Fixed prices to large retailers who map purchase from five to 10 units, will be 29c per pair. Small retailers are limited to one unit, 31c per pair. A unit equals nine cases packed 100 pairs to a case and consists of 200 pairs, size 30; 500 pairs, size 34; 100 pairs, size 38;

100 pairs, size 42. All merchandise offered at fixed prices, 7c to 12c per pair, and samples may be inspected at the Philadelphia Regional Offices in the Lafayette Building, Fifth and Chestnut Sts., Philadelphia. Orders will be accepted which are postmarked not later than 5 P. M., July 22, 1946 when the sale will close.

Two local merchants were authorized this week to solicit and negotiate sales of government-owned surplus machine tools and production equipment, according to Frank L. MacNamee, War Assets Administration Regional Director. They are: Carlin and Company, 238 Bala Ave., Bala, and Edward R. Feicht, 111 Old Lancaster Ave., both in Bala-Cynwyd.

The dealers are certified as sales representatives of the War Assets Administration to expedite the disposal of surplus machine tools and production equipment. They are principally machinery manufacturers and used machinery dealers, although others with sufficient engineering and sales background may qualify. Preference is given to World War II veterans having suitable qualifications. The dealers are paid sales commissions equal to 12 1/2 per cent of government disposal prices. Prices to buyers, however, are the same whether the equipment is bought through an approved dealer or direct from any WAA field office.

DRESS-UP — Take a basic dress like this washable one and dress it up with a flower halo and a handsome white pigskin shoulder bag and you're ready to go anywhere like Rosemary Rice, of NBC's "Adventures of Archie Andrews." The dress is a Sacoey design, the white lilac halo's by Flower Modes and the bag, in dark colors for fall, is by Jana.

Cold Wave Permanents Found Harmful In Scientific Tests

Cold wave preparations are definitely harmful to the scalp and hair, according to the results of exhaustive scientific tests recently completed.

New home permanent waves are also likely to be dangerous for the same reasons, the tests show.

The tests were made by the laboratory of Good Housekeeping magazine in response to many requests from women as to the merit of the cold wave permanent.

In the case of every cold wave preparation we have so far examined, our laboratory has advised us: "This cannot be considered entirely safe," an article in the June issue of the magazine states in part. The reasons back of the decision were:

"The cold-wave solutions we have examined contained thioglycolate, an ingredient widely used in depilatories and likely to be highly irritating to the skin. In patch tests we conducted on a group of people, too many developed irritations for us to regard it as entirely safe.

"The laboratory further found that these products tend to decompose standing on the dealers' shelves and in beauty shops. As they decompose they develop compounds that are potentially dangerous.

"Because thioglycolate is a depilatory with a destructive action on hair, it is extremely important to stop its action by treating the hair with an arresting solution at just the right point. The hair must be plastic enough to wave, but not damaged. In actual practice this is not easy. Frequently the hair keeps on breaking, so that the owner thinks, 'My hair is falling out or thinning.' A typical complaint is that of a reader who says: 'I had a cold wave a few weeks ago. It cost $20 and did not last at all.'"

Parent Problems

to discipline other people's children nor go out to the playground to settle a quarrel your child comes to you complaining about. If you do, you will train your child to be a tattler or cry-baby.

See that your young child does not bite another person or call him names. Instead, if physical pain is good treatment, preferably a spanking or paddling. Budget your time so you can always be on hand while your child is likely to bite another child, so he always gets instant pain connected with the offense. If another child bites your child, merely protect your child by keeping him away from the biter.

So long as your child is physically safe and is not with another child who is destroying or appropriating property or annoying others, and is out in the view of all, do not forbid him to play with any other child. What he might hear won't harm him much if you have his complete confidence and comradeship. If you tell him he must never play with a certain other child, you have started trouble for your child and probably for yourself with his parents.

Properly you might forbid him to play with this child when not supervised, but this is very different from telling him another child is not good enough to be his playmate. If you wish to read further on these matters, write me enclosing two self-addressed stamped envelopes and ask for my bulletins, "Your Child and His Playmates," and "Tot Learning To Be Sociable."

Pets can prove of great moral value to the growing child. They are old enough to do so, takes sole responsibility for the care of them. Teachers in the lower grades at school promote this moral value by assigning the care of one or several pets in the classroom to one or several children who take turns at this responsibility for a definite period. Usually the child at school measures up to this responsibility.

being so immediate and definite.

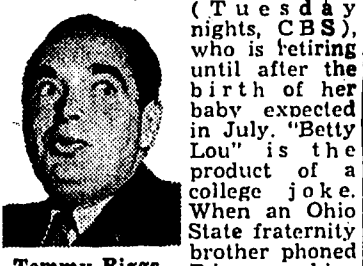

However, if he neglects to feed the pet he might properly be given very meager food himself at the next meal. It's a serious matter, you see. If protracted arguments and vexations have developed over the pet and you can't discipline yourself well enough to apply effective penalties, either dispose of the pet or resolve to care for it yourself and shut up. Under no condition should you allow yourself to go on scolding and acting mad about the matter.

I would guess that mothers care for at least 85% of all the pets which children have and enjoy as their very own, in the United States. Certainly the average child old enough to care for his pet does not, do so. Can any child enjoying a pet without taking sole responsibility for its care so far as he is able to do so keep from losing in moral value from having this pet? If all pets owned by children old enough to care for them but which are cared for by the mother or some other adult, were to be disposed of at once how many pets would be left do you suppose?

LITTLE THINGS about the Stars

By GEORGE LILLEY

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Ventriloquist Tommy Riggs, with girl friend "Betty Lou," is back on the radio after two years in the Navy. Pittsburgh born Riggs, 38, takes over for Songstress Ginny Simms (Tuesdays, CBS), who is taking a college joke.

Tommy Riggs

When an Ohio State fraternity brother phoned Riggs asking him to dinner, the girlish voice: "My father will be glad to come." The "news," when it got around, took no end of explaining to the Dean, so impressed Riggs himself that he developed the voice. More cute than bratish, "Betty Lou" exists only in Riggs' imagination. He uses no dummy for the act.

NOTES ON A SINGER • Dale Evans: Breathtaking songstress of the Jimmy Durante-Garry Moore radio program (Friday nights, CBS). Dale is somewhat of a song writer, having composed a nightclub ditty, "Will You Marry Me, Mr. Laramie?" that focused Hollywood eyes on her. Unable to set down music, Dale, upon inspiration, sings a song into a home recording machine, has a professional musician copy it off. She's another click from Texas way, daughter of a Uvalde cotton planter. Dale broke into radio rather ungloriously, discovering a Fort Worth insurance company had a radio program upon which it featured its own employees, she hired on as a stenographer. She made the program, all right!

Movie gunman Harold Huber has given it up to become a detective on the radio. He's playing Alphonse, a Belgian character, "Hercule Poirot," on the thriller, "Mystery of the Week," Monday through Friday evenings via CBS. Huber is the only actor in a family of seven doctors. He speaks French, Spanish and Italian; reads Latin and Sanskrit. He likes to cook. His specialty is eggs, passing very solemnly on the finished product. Huber got into the movies "ruly" by an accident. That accident left him a facial scar that won him his first gunnery role. He's played the part in 98 pictures. In real life he is a lawyer, graduate of Columbia University Law School.

Is Your Child Safe From Diphtheria?

Diphtheria prevention is safe. In millions of injections given to children, no permanent harm has come to a single child. Your child is usually not made uncomfortable by any degree by the treatment. The younger the child, the less likely is there to be any discomfort. You therefore need not worry when your child has been protected. There is no risk.

Remember it is the young child that most needs the protection. Most babies over six months of age can contract the disease. Most diphtheria deaths occur in the two-year olds. Eighty percent of diphtheria deaths are in those under five years of age. See your family doctor at once, or if you feel that you cannot afford that, small expense, take your child, if under school age, to the nearest Health Center of the Community Health and Civic Association. This is the last announcement in the present Diphtheria Prevention Campaign. The response has been most gratifying and the Board of Health takes this opportunity to express its sincere thanks for the splendid cooperation of the citizens of the Community, the Press, the motion picture theaters, and the medical profession.
